

top and in contact with the platinum-rhodium layer, wherein the electrode has a lateral surface aligned with the source/drain region; and a conductive plug providing electrical contact between the source/drain region and the lateral surface of the electrode.